It's happening all across America. Rural landowners get a lucrative offer from an energy company wanting to lease their property. Reason? The company hopes to tap into a reservoir dubbed the "Saudi Arabia of natural gas." All because Halliburton has developed a fast way to get this resource out of the ground, a hydraulic drilling process called "fracking" that injects a mixture of water, chemicals and salts deep into the earth that cracks the rock and releases the natural gas. The problem is this process is poisoning the water and making fire come out of people's taps. One of the most controversial environmental issues and films to come along in a very long time.
